A.Q: Turning off multiple satellite broadcast signals I am trying to turn off all of the TV signals from multiple satellites and I have seen on a TV Guide that you can change the VHF setting. Is there a way to turn off all of the satellite bands? Below is the bands I want to disable: -4G -47E -36E -17E -46G -36G -37E -45E -37D -37G -15E A: Some TV remotes use separate buttons for each band. The name of the button varies by manufacturer. If not, you can use a remote with more than one button to change the channels of the TV. Depending on the model, they may be labeled "TV1," "TV2" or "TV+" You then use the plus button to scroll through channels and the minus button to return to the default. Sarcoidosis and neuro-Behçet's disease. The term Behçet's disease or Behçet's syndrome was originally used to describe a disorder which involves recurrent oral and genital aphthae, uveitis, skin lesions and venous thrombosis. In the International Study Group criteria, the diagnosis can be made when at least three out of the four key symptoms are present. Although the association between sarcoidosis and Behçet's syndrome was first reported in 1981, it was the endocrinopathies that lead to a diagnosis of neuro-Behçet's disease. Neuro-Behçet's disease is rare but can be very disabling. Diagnostic confirmation is essential before starting immunosuppressive treatment. It is important to emphasize that the frequency of granulomatous lesions in sarcoidosis has not changed after the introduction of antituberculous agents, thus questioning the role of mycobacteria in
