Find out if your server is down. Compatible with Windows/Linux FTP servers. Configuration via text files. Optional email-based notification. Screenshot: Full Review Devil7 - FTP Alarm is a lightweight application that can monitor your FTP server and gives you notices about any change that took place within it. It can be set up to scan the server for changes with a given interval, so you don't need to check the client manually. The interface is simple and well-built. TO set up an alarm interval, just fill in the fields from "Alarm Interval" and the app will notify you at every time the time is up. You can also set the "Max Depth" so you can control how deep the app scans for changes. Another noticeable tab is "Settings" from where you can tweak the app a little more. From there you can set up the FTP server/host and provide your username and password. The notifications containing the changes can be sent email, voice alerts or ringtones. Just pick one method, personalize it, and the tool is ready to go. In conclusion, Devil7 - FTP Alarm can be a good choice for FTP users that want to save some time and automatize the notification process.
