Large surf waves with periods ranging between 10 seconds and 3 minutes have been observed for the first time on the coast of Chile's oceanside metropolis, Valparaíso. The result, published in the journal Nature, has been described as an "extraordinary science story". The study is a collaboration between researchers from the University of Western Australia in Perth and the University of Chile in Santiago, and is expected to provide invaluable new insights into how the Earth's crust and mantle interact in the region. Geologist Kenchô Todaka, from the University of Chile, said: "We have been studying the geology of Valparaíso since 2008, but the 2018 wave event was a new experience for all involved." Researchers were first made aware of the potential for a rogue wave to hit the coast in 2008 when they discovered unusual, metre-high waves that washed over the shoreline every 10 minutes, travelling from the open Pacific to the ocean depths. Todaka and colleagues then compiled more than 50 measurements

Free Elden Ring [Mac/Win] (Updated 2022)

346 Mich. 206 (1956) ELIZABETHTOWN v. MORRISON Docket No. 53, Calendar No. 46,394. Supreme Court of Michigan. Decided November 27, 1956. Alan K. Wachsman, for plaintiff. Scholten & Fant, for defendants. Amicus Curiae: Richard J. Durbin, for Chrysler Corporation. SHARPE, J. By the circuit court's opinion and order plaintiff Henry O. Morrison recovered of defendants damages totaling $16,905.56 for repairs to the chassis of his automobile. *207 Plaintiff in his automobile was struck in the rear by a 1949 Buick automobile owned by defendant Karrick Morrison; as a result of the collision the rear of plaintiff's automobile was torn off. The engine and upper body of plaintiff's automobile were damaged. The rear axle and rims were damaged. The front end and chassis of plaintiff's automobile were damaged. Plaintiff's automobile was towed to defendants' garage, which was operated by defendant Morrison. Defendants and plaintiff entered into a contract which provided that if defendants failed to perform the repairs in 60 days plaintiff should pay defendants 50 per cent of the cost of the repairs, plus a stipulated sum; defendants warranted the repairs would be free from defects. Defendants were paid for repairs but plaintiff sued for the difference between what defendants had paid and what they should have paid. The trial court relied on § 2 of the contract as a warranty against hidden defects. The trial court found defendants were entitled to $4,881.16 for the repairs. The trial court held defendants must bear the loss of the repairs in the sum of $16,905.56. Defendants appeal and cite the following as error: (1) There is no privity of contract between plaintiff and defendants. (2) The trial court erred in taking judicial notice of facts appearing in the inspection report, even though the report was made a part of the record. (3) There was no showing of fraudulent concealment and suppression of the defect. (4) There was no showing of any negligence which would bar plaintiff's claim. (5) The trial court erred in fixing damages at 50 per cent of the cost of repairs. *208 Defendants argue that plaintiff's automobile was not damaged by a hidden defect and is not within the scope of § 2 of the contract. The fact
