The grant provides drivers with an opportunity to participate in the BMW Vision CUP and familiarise themselves with what makes the XDrive M Performance model different from its predecessors. A panel of national media and representatives from BMW Motorsport Singapore judged the 'spirit of the sport' in the six entries of the BMW VISION CUP. The 2017 Singapore Grand Prix was the sixth running of the BMW Vision CUP and was held on the Sepang International Circuit on Friday October 26th. The event produced some memorable moments and represented an excellent new addition to the traditional race calendar. The BMW VISION CUP has become a popular format for racing fans and drivers to get a taste of what touring car racing would be like should it make its way into the Supercars Championship. The events were beamed live on on SG Motorsports TV in the lead up to the main race. Full Disk Encryption (FDE) is a user interface enhancement of the disk partitioning command line tool fdisk, originally designed to provide additional security for computer systems. Based on the Unix crypt(3) function, FDE encodes all data on a disk in a randomly generated format before writing the disk's contents to disk. When the file system is mounted, the FDE key is used to decrypt the data before it is available to the operating system. Installation The first software and hardware available for FDE was the Sun Sun FDS full disk encryption protocol, which has been overseen by the Open FDE project. FDE is today available on several operating systems and hardware platforms. Sun FDS provides a programming interface via the sun.policy command line utility. Specifically it allows the creation, editing, and removal of encrypted disks with a disk partitioning utility such as fdisk. A simple graphical interface for this purpose exists in various free Unix-like operating systems including Linux, FreeBSD and GNU/Linux. In order to use FDE a partitioning program such as fdisk or GParted is needed. How to Get FDE to Work? The following is a simple example on how to turn on full disk encryption for a Linux/Unix system with fdisk. Step 1 - Assume that you have an Intel PC with an Intel CPU that has a hardware FDE key. In that case, type the following fdisk command at the command line prompt on the PC. # fdisk /dev/hda then type the following command: # c You will be prompted to enter the letter "Y" to use the default key or "n" to set a new one. Now type "n" to set a new password. # n Next, type the following command. # e Finally, type the following command and press Enter. # w You will now see a series of /sda1 and /sda2 entries. Just type the following command to mount the filesystem. # mount /dev/sda1 /mnt/sda1 The filesystem will now be available from the command line for use. The /mnt/sda1 directory can be used to mount partitions of the same name on another disk, floppy disk,
